

Family

As I'm sure it has done for the rest of you, this summer has flown by for us. The girls each enjoyed a week at camp (Sabrina and Olivia at a camp close to home, and Alyssa at M-Fuge in Glorieta, NM.) They also enjoyed lots of sleepovers with friends and continued their ice skating lessons. We spent 3 1/2 weeks traveling as well, covering over 3,700 miles. After attending a week long CAM conference, we visited two supporting churches, and enjoyed spending some time with family and friends, fitting in two family reunions. As the summer draws to a close, Jennifer is preparing for our 7th year of homeschooling. Alyssa will start high school this year, Sabrina will be in 6th grade and Olivia will be in 4th grade.

CAM International becomes Camino Global

July 15-21 found our whole missionary body gathered for a convention at the YMCA of the Rockies in Estes Park, Colorado for the culmination of "re-inventing" the mission agency by naming Douglas Livingston as our new president. CAM, under its new name, Camino Global, remains as C.I. Scofield intended when he founded it as the Central American Mission in 1890. We are now not only involved in the evangelization and training of Latins, but are walking shoulder to shoulder as equals in ministry as we move forward with reaching the lost around the world with the Gospel.

Our kids had a marvelous time during this week in Colorado, making new friends and enjoying the outdoor activities. Jennifer and I enjoyed serving our Camino missionary family HOPE Coffee each morning and sharing with them how we want to support their ministries through HOPE Coffee.

Business as Mission

At this Colorado convention, we received the following requests from several of our missionaries as I held breakout sessions on business as mission: "Do you know any business people that can come and.... help our team start a coffee shop; help make our self-defense classes profitable; help us figure out what business and ministry opportunities exist in our town; run a company to fund our evangelistic outreach choirs?" As you can see, the need for business people to engage in missions is more than just painting walls; it includes meeting real business needs while also blending in the ability to live the Christian life by sharing the Gospel. If you know of someone who would love to participate with us, please let us know.

HOPE Coffee

God is at work through HOPE Coffee as we share our profits to do ministry in Honduras. This summer, a team was able to help a small national church build a church building for their congregation. Pray for the workers you see in this picture as several of them are not yet believers in Christ.

The church that Hope Coffee built

As part of the growth of HOPE Coffee, we have been able to hire a part-time sales and marketing employee to help our team of volunteers. Pray for the connections Tammy makes with the church leaders whom we met at the ECHO Conference. On October 12-13, we will be at the Seattle MissionsFest serving HOPE coffee to 4000 people, and on November 7-9, we will be serving about 2,500 people in Dallas at the Right Now Conference . Please pray as we work through the logistics for these conferences. We would also like you to pray that God would provide a total of 75 church partners by the end of this year to make the switch to serving “coffee with eternal purpose”.
